Re: S.B. 698

Dear Senators Lieber and Knopp,

The Professional Certification Coalition (PCC) writes regarding S.B. 698. We appreciate that the bill aims to advance the important goal of expanding opportunities for those with criminal conviction histories. We respectfully propose an amendment to ensure protections for the public and certification organizations that rely on licensure decisions.

The PCC is a nonpartisan, nonprofit association formed to address legislation that affects professional certification programs, those who hold private certification credentials, and the many constituencies that rely on professional certification. The PCC's organizational members include non-governmental professional certification organizations, professional societies, and service providers. The PCC's members reflect a wide spectrum of professions, including health care, engineering, financial services, and information technology, among many others. Our founding organizations – the American Society of Association Executives (the leading organization for association management) and the Institute for Credentialing Excellence (the leading developer of accreditation standards for professional certification programs) – govern the PCC.

The PCC supports the goal of ensuring that individuals who have learned from past mistakes are not stigmatized in perpetuity. But licensing agencies and certification organizations need access to the record of certain past criminal convictions to make critical decision about conferring credentials that endorse the individual as trustworthy.

Some nonviolent and non-sex-offender crimes merit a continuing disqualification from certain professions, such as if a licensed financial advisor has engaged in identity theft or embezzled from clients. Further, many misdemeanor convictions result from plea bargains, even though the underlying offense would constitute a felony or a misdemeanor that carries a longer maximum sentence. A misdemeanor conviction for which the sentence has been served may still be relevant to an applicant's fitness to perform an occupation.

Licensing boards play a critical role in ensuring that the public can safely engage the services of a licensed professional. Licensing boards should not be prevented from having access to information that bears on an applicant's fitness to perform a profession, especially where that information has been established beyond a reasonable doubt, with due process to the applicant. Such restrictions on licensing boards are a major concern for certification organizations in licensed professions, as they would in effect transfer the burden of enforcement of conduct codes and screening from the licensing board to the certification organization. Wholly voluntary certification organizations may also be affected, as they often look to the professional standing of licensed candidates. Private certification organizations play an important role in conferring credentials on which the public relies and which conveys the certification organization's endorsement that the individual meets the competency, knowledge, and conduct standards required for the credential.

To address these concerns, the PCC proposes that a new safe harbor provision be added:

“Notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary, nothing in this chapter shall prevent a licensing authority or certification organization from accessing, or requiring an individual to disclose, the individual’s expunged misdemeanor and felony conviction records in connection with a decision on the licensing or certification status of the individual. A licensing agency or certification organization may use such information solely in connection with that decision and may take an action based on an expunged conviction only if the underlying conduct resulting in the prior conviction would, if committed by a current licensee or certificant, be the basis for disciplinary action by the licensing authority or certification organization.”

Thank you for your consideration of this amendment. If you have any questions regarding this letter, please feel free to reach out to us using the contact information identified below.
