Re: SB 2713

Dear Representatives Button and Talarico:

The Professional Certification Coalition (PCC)¹ writes to raise concerns regarding SB 2713. In its current form, SB 2713 intrudes on the First Amendment rights of private certification organizations. For these reasons, the PCC must oppose SB 2713 unless it is amended to limit its scope only to prohibiting discrimination on the basis of demographic characteristics.

Although the bill includes language about “freedom of speech or assembly” of individuals, it aims to trample the constitutional rights of associations and certification organizations. The sponsor’s statement of intent underscores that the purpose of the bill is to prevent organizations that issue professional certifications and professional societies from enforcing their bylaws and codes of conduct and treating it as unlawful for the organization to discipline members or certificants for public speech that violates the rules of the organization.

With rare exception, it is unconstitutional to “interfere with the internal organization or affairs of [a] group” such as a private association or certification organization. In the words of the Supreme Court, in Roberts v. Jaycees, 468 U.S. 609 (1984):

There can be no clearer example of an intrusion into the internal structure or affairs of an association than a regulation that forces the group to accept members it does not desire. Such a regulation may impair the ability of the original members to express only those views that brought them together. Freedom of association therefore plainly presupposes a freedom not to associate.

In the Roberts case, the Supreme Court, applying strict scrutiny, held that the state of Minnesota had a narrowly tailored, compelling state interest in enforcing its generally applicable law against sex discrimination to require the Jaycees to admit women as members. In allowing the state law to override the association’s own rules, the Supreme Court emphasized that nothing in the

Minnesota law would “impede the organization’s ability to engage in these protected activities or to disseminate its preferred views. The Act ... imposes no restrictions on the organization’s ability to exclude individuals with ideologies or philosophies different from those of its existing members.” This is emphatically not the case with SB 2713, which would prohibit an association or certification organization for denying or revoking membership or certification “because of [a] person’s exercise of the person’s freedom of speech or assembly, notwithstanding any provision of the association’s bylaws.” This proposed interference by the Texas legislature into the right of private organizations to establish and enforce their disciplinary codes cannot survive strict scrutiny.

Unfortunately, because the legislation in its current form goes too far in violating the First Amendment rights of private associations and certification organizations, the PCC must oppose the bill.
